

WARE

ROME FALLS

These Things Are Not Your Friends

It's not necessary to achieve,
Closure, why should we
Be capable of understanding our reality?

Solar systems like our own
Are as common as popcorn on a theatre floor.
Science lifts the veils,
Science opens the door.

These things are not your friends,
These are the habitual on which society depends,
Culture and ideology, feeding current trends,
They push against our novelty, but we'll get there in the end.

Human world explodes at the seams.
Creation and implementation,
Of human technologies,
Accelerated, like never before.

Invisible, permeating something.
Throughout all being, all time, all space,
This something is called Novelty,
It's ever increasing, affecting all reality.

These things are not your friends,
These are the habitual on which society depends,
Culture and ideology, feeding current trends,
They push against our novelty, but we'll get there in the end.